AUTO TRUCK CUTS OFF CHILD'S HEAD; HER CHUM DYING.

Big Electric Vehicle Speeds Around Corner and Without Warning Crushes Little Girls at 116th Street and Lenox Avenue.

Marie Fargo, aged six years, of No. 15 East One Hundred and Twelfth street, was beheaded and instantly killed, and her playmate, Madeline Oppen, aged nine years, of the same address, was mortally injured at noon to-day by an electric truck of the Edison General Electric Company, driven by Anthony S. Deering, of No. 450 West Forty-ninth street.

The accident occurred at One Hundred and Sixteenth street and Lenox avenue, and was followed by a riot of such proportions that the police reserves of the West One Hundred and Fourth Street Station were called out.

The Oppen girl lived with her father, Adolf Oppen, and shortly before noon she sent her to the grocery store to get a loaf of bread. She took along with her Marie Fargo, her constant companion, and the daughter of the landlord, Mrs. Mary Fargo.

Pushing south on Lenox avenue at a terrific speed was the electric truck. The children were on the crossing in the center of One Hundred and Sixteenth street, without warning. Deering veered his big vehicle east on Lenox and Sixteenth street and crushed both of the girls to the pavement.

The forward right wheel passed over the back of the Fargo child and completely severed her head. The other girl was knocked down, bruised and internally injured. At the Harlem Hospital it was said that the chances of her recovery are slight.

Police Officer Henry S. Simony, two weeks a patrolman, happened to be on the corner and saw the accident. He climbed on the truck and dragged the chauffeur and his helper, Thomas Mawhinney, from their seats. Both resisted arrest, and it was not until they saw a gathering crowd that they ceased trying to shake off the police officer.

LIONS IN CENTRAL PARK ZOO FIGHT THROUGH CAGE BARS.

Dewey and Secretary Don't Like New Arrangement, but Fail to Damage Each Other.

Until now the partition walls of the outdoor cages at the cat house in the Central Park Zoo have been of solid wood, so that the big prisoners could not see one another. But to-day, carpenters yanked away the barriers of plank and when three of the male lions—Dewey, Secretary and Leo—came forth to snarl the morning air, they found themselves separated only by iron bars.

Dewey and Secretary didn't like the appearance of each other. With one accord they sprang at the bars, clawing and growling and scratching, but the iron barriers were so close together that they could do no harm.

Leo, which had the end cage, thought so poorly of the new arrangement that he went into his inner boudoir and stayed there, complaining to himself in the lion language.

The other lions—Aralia, Locomotive, Snow and Helen, are to have open work cages in their cages before many more days.
